

Richard Harding Davis - Somewhere in France

LibriVox

Somewhere in France

by Richard Harding Davis (1864 - 1916)

When Captain Henri Ravnac married Marie Gessler, he was mistakenly thinking she was French. But Marie is in fact German, and her command of the French language and culture makes her a perfect spy. At the first opportunity, she double-crossed Captain Ravnac and stole valuable documents from him, which makes her a great candidate for espionage when World War I breaks out. Travelling with the documents of Countess d'Aurillac, she moves behind enemy lines, but the life of a spy is typically turbulent and short...

Read by Crln Yldz Ksr

3 files, 1:02:26

Proof Listener: Laura Victoria

Cover from the original book, artist unknown

Design: Bart de Leeuw

Meta-Coordinator/Cataloging: Crln Yldz Ksr

For more information, or to volunteer, please visit: librivox.org.
All LibriVox productions are in the public domain.

Richard Harding Davis - Somewhere in France